"We are looking forward to bringing the full-body awareness that only real-life motion capture can provide in FIFA. Over the last two years, the development team has been working closely with our top sports partners and professional football athletes to validate our technology with movements. The result is this year's FIFA, where we are taking advantage of real-life speed and realism to make gameplay easier to understand and more intuitive to control," said Alex Thurley, SVP and General Manager of EA Sports FIFA. FIFA 22 comes to stores on September 8 and features the following new features: - Football League: Every football fan can feel like he has been tapped into the world of the football league, as they track stats, customize their own teams, challenge friends and prepare for next season. In Football League, fans can view all of their team's league positions across all sports and their team performances, create a fantasy football team that compiles all of their rankings in the FIFA Ultimate Team FUT mode, and see how the league's Top 50 fans are performing in real-time. All stats and replays from matches are displayed to make it possible to recreate the feeling of being there. - Shot Engagement: The shot to goal system in FIFA has been improved with clearer detection of shots on goal and better accuracy when locking onto targets. - Goalkeeper Modifications: Working in collaboration with FIFA Ultimate Team, next-generation goalie models have been implemented in FIFA 22. Goalies now take into account the player's movement, real-life physique and diving style. - In-Play Experience: Players can now experience the thrill of the ball locking onto them during the crucial moments of the game, and the pitch can even react to their movement. - Goalkeeper AI: Goalkeepers are now smarter and react differently to situations, letting them know whether they're under pressure, in line with the distance between the player and the goal, and whether their next touch is on the right or left foot. - Catching: Players can now more easily determine where the ball will go from a pass with the new, intuitive drop of the shoulder mechanic. - Tactical Edge: Players can use new tactics to gain advantage over their opponents with the Tactical Edge. - Realistic Physics: With more realistic physics and a new control system, users can perform aerial duels, ground duels and control
