of 'The Avengers' Superheroes A little over two decades ago, Marvel published an unbelievable comic event: Captain America was fatally wounded, hemorrhaging blood into his brain, as he lay trapped in an armored car with his loyal lieutenant Bucky, who had survived the crash thanks to a well placed explosive. The ensuing fight between Cap and his fellow Red Skull forces Bucky to don a Captain America costume and, with this trickery, act as Cap. Only after escaping the Sanctum Sanctorum do we realize what exactly this means. Cap is no longer Cap! But this most unusual duet was, for the time, lauded as the greatest of comic books. "The Rage of Skrulls" had always been Cap's most tumultuous adventure; his latest challenge, a desperate face-off with the Red Skull in the Oklahoma City airport, only made this crisis worse. The tide of the story had already begun to ebb when Steve Rogers jumped from the plane with his arm booby-trapped with explosives. Thanks to Iron Man's robotic replacement parts, he could not be captured and brought back to imprisonment. Cap was now a committed suicide bomber. His Red Nazis had blown up the plane with the only superpowered weapons they had, the World War II-era rocket pack. As if that weren't bad enough, Cap's captors admitted to him that they were Skrulls, an alien species of shape-shifting aliens who had been hiding among Earth's population in secret projects, but whose primary reason for everything was to better understand and dominate the Earth as a playground. Before the mystified Rogers could even react, the Skrulls had taken control of Bucky as their subject, forcing Cap's own flesh-and-blood love, Peggy Carter, to shoot him. Only after all that blood and torture, was Rogers allowed to die. With Cap dead, the remainder of The Avengers was struggling to go on. Bucky became Cap's next of kin (the Bucky The Bear T-shirt is today's equivalent of the death pillow). Goliath the Arnim Zola was now in charge of the S.H.I.E.L.D. intelligence network in Vietnam. Pepper Potts was now Tony Stark's secretary (she still tries to thwart the next Stark-worthy plot after all these years). Captain America would live

JOHOR BARU: The Johor Baru Court has been told to hear two challenges to the validity of the High Court ruling over the Malaysia Agreement by the United Kingdom Parliament and the Attorney-General (AG) of Singapore. Metropolis Group's lawyer Raja Paramplaksa argued the High Court could only have jurisdiction as it was a matter "collected under Article 127 of the Federal Constitution of Malaysia". He also argued the Metropolitan Sessions Court is under the jurisdiction of the High Court. "In any case, the challenge has been filed for the first time," he said. Raja Paramplaksa also claimed that unlike in the United Kingdom, the judiciary of Singapore is separate, independent and impervious to political interference. If this is not right, let it get right, open session was convened today. Better out than in! — Dato Raja Ayub (@rashiddimol) October 26, 2019 This was his closing submission during the first hearing at the Johor Baru Sessions Court. The hearing was adjourned until April 2020 on Monday (Oct 29) and Raja Paramplaksa appeared at the court again on Tuesday (Oct 30), which was adjourned to Nov 8. Dato Raja Ayub had earlier filed a motion to obtain an extension till Dec 5 to hear the two challenges filed by Metropolis Group's lawyer, former Dewan Rakyat Speaker Tan Sri Pandikar Amin Mulia and the AG's office. He said the adjudication order handed down by the High Court on the challenges was decided on Sept 18 and the Registry of the High Court here had refused to accept the challenges from the Singapore side. Admitting that attorney-general Lim Ming Ee submitted a letter requesting for an extension of time to file the challenges dated Oct 4 in the Office of the Attorney-General, Raja Ayub said the letter had been given to the Registrar of the High Court. �
