Bryce has been with the Highlanders for nine years since taking over from Jason White in 2015, which has been a fruitful period for his side, which includes two Super Rugby titles, two consecutive Mitre 10 Cup titles and a National Provincial Championship. His first involvement with the provincial side was as assistant coach alongside Adam Thomson, for whom he also worked at the Scottish Rugby Academy. Their work together at the Scottish Rugby Academy and with the Highlanders earned Bryce a high-profile coaching role at Murrayfield and the backroom staff roles at the French Top 14 club and the Australian Super Rugby side. A three-time All Blacks trialist, Bryce has captained the Pacific Islanders Sevens side and was also part of their 2010 Rugby World Cup squad. Highlanders Head Coach Aaron Mauger said: "We're thrilled to have signed James. He's had a fantastic career and been very successful at the Highlanders, where he's enjoyed a productive relationship with Adam Thomson and has learnt a lot as he's gone along. His knowledge of the Highlanders set up is extensive and his experience working as a coach in the Super Rugby and Championship together with his coaching pedigree will be a real asset to us." Highlanders Assistant Coach Adam Thomson said: "I can't wait to join James and the Highlanders to work with him again.
