Horizon Zero Dawn's action-RPG gameplay is similar to that of developer Guerilla Games' most beloved franchise, Killzone. In an interview with Eurogamer, Guerrilla's CEO Hermen Hulst calls the game an "honor to Killzone," and he's not wrong. To experience this #content, you will need to enable targeting cookies. Yes, we know. Sorry. Manage cookie settings Horizon Zero Dawn is set hundreds of years in the future, when post-human machines have taken over most of the world, and it's up to a young hunter named Aloy to take on their military faction, the machines' expansionist military force, the Mechanist Faction. A machine hunter and mercenary, Aloy quickly joins a band of rebel hunters known as The Sargas, and then a clan of enemy hunters known as the Outriders. As she fights her way towards the enemy's stronghold in the machines' den, Aloy sets out to rescue her mysterious mentor, Trico. During the course of her adventure, she will have to overcome obstacles and technological challenges, defeat hordes of enemies, acquire powerful weapons, and face the leader of the opposing faction, chief engineer Cerkez, whose goal is to take over Aloy's tribe, as well as the entire world, and rule it as his new world order. Eurogamer recently had the opportunity to speak with Hermen Hulst, Guerrilla Games' founder, CEO, and COO of Guerrilla Cambridge. Hulst discussed what their goals for the franchise were for the new game, what they've learned from Killzone, and how the new setting for Horizon Zero Dawn is "completely different" than anything they've done before. The Beginnings of Horizon Zero Dawn Eurogamer: When did Horizon Zero Dawn start? Hermen Hulst: When we started development, the whole team was already working on Killzone, but the development time for the first Killzone had pretty much passed. We had to come up with something really fast. After a while, all our brain power was focused on that, and when we started thinking about a new project, Killzone was in a pretty good shape. We had the idea for a new setting, and at the same time, we wanted to see more variety Vision. Digital engineers will make a difference in the world because they'll help us see things as they are. We'll outpace too-big, too-complex systems of nearly 2 million components thanks to "retail" or "retro-replacement" software. We'll launch the next New Space Telescope for $50M — "computer vision" software will cut the cost to under $50M. The future of computing will be "Soft-Ware" and "Software-driven". The future of computing is Decoupled. For instance, servers will have optical interfaces to auxiliary memory systems. Software will be on file cards or platters held in memory modules or discs driving new paradigm computers. The future of computing will be Social, Popular, and Empowering. The next wave of software platforms will empower people not just with a tool to sit at home and leave operations to themselves. People will feel more a part of their computing, their friends, their businesses, and their communities. Because they will be working from home, on vacation, or working with "total nerd" technologies. Everything will move into Infrastructure-as-a-Service; Design-as-a-Service; Service-as-a-Service; Developer-as-a-Service and Computing-as-a-Service. The future of computing is people-first, and platform-agnostic. What will drive the future of Computing? Activations by Software: Software is used, the driver is the final action. Creating apps will become a way to view the world around us (think Google Earth) or new experiences that we can't even begin to imagine today. There is too many "expected" steps to be done to reproduce the Energy of the 21st Century's Computer Revolution which occurred in 80s and 90s. Business for a change, should focus on the value a) Products and b) are/have created for the consumer. By the end of 2019, every person in the world will have access to $1.1 trillion in unbanked assets
