Category:The Lawyers English Language Coursebook Category:Law books Category:International law Category:Legal English Category:1998 booksMost of us, by now, know that artists have a way of getting lost in their work. Particularly as individuals. Most would agree that for artists, art is their life. Which is why many artists' lives become the most intense time of their lives. It's not unusual for people to have their own ways of dealing with their intense obsession: from the days when painters and poets made recordings of their experiences to the present with writers venturing into the realms of the collective, many artists offer the shared experiences of their lives through the written word. Brigid Doherty is a poet/singer who has lived a life that is a constant reflection of her work. She's a co-founder of the Sea Shanties collective, an artist who's work has found a home in the tradition of the Wailin' Nikki's of the Pacific Northwest, and of course, has spent many an hour telling stories about the seaside and its characters at our monthly sessions at the Chappel. Being a part of Sea Shanties, has been a great aspect of Brigid's life. She's been able to combine her passions for music, people, and storytelling with her time on the water. Let's hope she's able to do the same with her latest venture, a podcast that will tell stories about the pirates of the Pacific Northwest, as Sea Shanties seems to be gaining momentum in terms of both style and audience. But getting back to Brigid and her life, it's no mystery as to why her story is so compelling. For her, the sea's just one facet of life. Much like literature, she's found a way to combine fiction with non-fiction. She e79caf774b
