The Latest: Suspect arrested for fiery officer-involved shooting The 2-year-old was wounded in the June 28 shooting MOUNT VERNON, Ill. -- The Latest on the fatal officer-involved shooting of a 2-year-old boy (all times local): 2:05 p.m. The man accused of fatally shooting a 2-year-old boy in June at a Washington Park apartment complex has been arrested. Cook County Sheriff's spokesman Anthony Guglielmi says the suspect is Tyrese Howard, 27. Howard was arrested Tuesday morning. The Cook County State's Attorney's Office charged Howard with first degree murder. The shooting occurred June 28 at the Washington Park Garden Apartments in the Austin neighborhood. Guglielmi says the shooting stemmed from an argument over a "loud noise." The father of the toddler says he and his family were trying to enjoy a quiet evening and watched a movie when the shooting occurred. Fearsome Kinetite, who lives next door to where the shooting happened, says he was in his bedroom and heard nothing. He says he thinks people need to "get a grip on their anger, on the anger of the streets." ——— 1:15 p.m. A Chicago man has been arrested and charged with the June fatal shooting of a 2-year-old boy. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to systems and methods for transmitting data among physical objects. 2. Description of the Related Art Today's electronic communication systems rely on various signaling techniques to transmit data from one physical object to another. In one example, the Transfer Control Protocol (TCP) is used for unidirectional data flow. For unidirectional transmission, the sender pre-allocates an outgoing transmission window (i.e., a storage region in which it can write data for transmission), and writes data into the pre-allocated window in a sequential order. The pre-allocated window is held open until the data written into the pre-allocated window is flushed to the receiver, and the data in the pre-allocated window is then pre-empted for the receiver. For example, in a typical scenario, the sender pre-allocates a data window of length 16 to a receiver. The sender writes data into the pre-allocated window in a sequential order, as if it is storing a sixteen-byte payload. However, if the receiver, which is receiving the data, is full, the receiver does not receive the final chunk of data for its incoming window, and the data remains in
