Exe file Astrovison.exe.exe cracked with serial key for use.Q: Cannot attach to process with debugger when running as a console application in VS2010 I'm developing an application that includes an internal unit test framework and now want to be able to debug the tests while the application is running as a console application. I have set the "Attach to process..." option in the Debug Options dialog so that I can debug from the explorer. Before attaching the tests to a running application using this option, I have set the option "Remote only" to "Yes", because there were issues where the output from the tests was shown in the explorer, due to the debugger not being able to handle the extra threads created by the tests. After attaching, I have to click "Stop", and then "Restart and debug" to get the behavior where the tests work, while the application continues to run. I don't understand why the tests have to be stopped and restarted, and what the "Remote Only" option is for. I had assumed that since the "Attach to process" option is set to "Yes", it would automatically attach to the test process. I'm using VS2010 with .NET 4.0. A: In the window that pops up saying that the debugger is attaching to a process, you are given the option "Attach to the Process". This is equivalent to pressing "Start" followed by "Attach to process...". This option is not separate. `import MyApplication, DllImport DllImport("user32.dll") Public Sub ShowWindow(Handle As IntPtr, WindCmd As Integer) Dim title As String = My.Application.Info.Title If Not title.ToUpper.Contains("DEBUG") Then My.Application.DoEvents() End If My.ShowWindow(Handle`
